Prospects

Beauty has never looked this good

by Jean-Paul Agon,
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

full interview in the digital version

“ As people’s desires for beauty grow in multiple ways worldwide, beauty has never looked this good. Market growth accelerated in 2017, stimulated by extremely favourable demographic and sociological developments. In this dynamic market, L’Oréal achieved a great new year in terms of sales and results. ”

We strengthened our positions in categories, distribution channels and regions of the world, which are strategic for the future.

First, in the two most important categories of the market, makeup and skincare. Secondly, in two key sectors: selective, where L’Oréal Luxe has experienced its strongest growth since 2000, and dermocosmetics, where our Active Cosmetics Division has passed the two billion euro mark. In the New Markets also where, for the first time, we surpassed ten billion euros in sales, particularly thanks to the dynamism of the Asia, Pacific Zone. Lastly, two growth boosters are running full steam ahead: on the one hand, 2017 was another great year of digital acceleration. Our e-commerce sales grew by +34%⁽¹⁾ and online sales now exceed two billion euros, representing nearly 25% of sales in a digitally advanced country like China. On the other hand, Travel Retail, a high potential channel where L’Oréal celebrated its 40 years by strengthening its leadership position.

L’Oréal also delivered good results achieving a record operating margin of 18%.

The year was marked by a sharp increase in net income, up +15.3%, as well as by a dividend increase that will be proposed at the Annual General Meeting⁽²⁾. The Group has once again shown the strength of its powerful, balanced and value-creating business model.

But our mission goes beyond economic success. This year, through our sustainability programme, “Sharing Beauty With All”, we have once again demonstrated that economic performance and environmental and social performance go hand in hand and are even mutually reinforcing. For example, in 2017, the reduction in our CO₂ emissions reached -73% since 2005, whilst at the same time, our production increased by +33%.

Our performances have been widely recognised. L’Oréal was the top performing global company on Newsweek’s 2017 Global 500 Green Rankings and CDP⁽³⁾, the most respected authority in sustainability, awarded us, for the second year running, three “A” ratings for our actions in fighting climate change, water management and combatting deforestation. Another great source of pride - because it is a long struggle - is the fact that L’Oréal has come first in the worldwide rankings on gender equality among over 3,000 companies rated by Equileap.

(1) Sales achieved on our brands’ own websites + estimated sales achieved by our brands corresponding to sales through our retailers’ websites (non-audited data); like-for-like growth.

(2) Dividend proposed at the Annual General Meeting of 17 April 2018. (3) CDP is an independent international organisation that evaluates companies’ environmental performance.

Being a leader both economically and socially is our goal.

Our ambition allows us to have a positive impact on the environment and society, as well as sustaining our success in the long-term. Overall, 2017 was a year of significant progress for L'Oréal, a pivotal year at a pivotal time. We are entering 2018 and the coming years with great confidence in our unique and original business model, ideally suited to this new world of beauty, full of new promises and opportunities.

Let me share with you what I call our seven reasons for success.

Firstly, a beauty market that will continue to grow in the coming years. This is in part thanks to the emergence of the new middle and upper classes who are powerful consumers of beauty, especially of premium products. But also the result of major shifts which reveal new needs, such as urbanisation or ageing populations.

2017 VivaTech Exhibition

Secondly, L'Oréal is the archetype of the "Beauty Pure Player" - nothing but beauty, for all types of beauty - and our unique expertise acquired over 109 years, allows us to understand, in extreme detail, the desires and aspirations of consumers all around the world.

Thirdly, our fundamentals, the reasons for our success today which will be the reasons for our success tomorrow: the obsession of innovation and superior quality, more important than ever in a world of ratings and reviews: our continuous strategic focus on Research & Innovation is absolutely necessary; the power of our brands, more essential than ever in a world of consumer hyper-choice: the richness of our complementary brands, eight of which are already billionaires, makes and will continue to make the difference; the star products, strong and powerful, in a world of algorithms.

The fourth reason is our superior digital prowess in a world where technological developments are crucial.

Fifth, our unique multipolar footprint in all categories, distribution channels and regions of the world helps us to spot new consumer trends more quickly and to adapt in real time to market developments.

Sixth: the recognised excellence of our environmental and social commitments.

Finally: in a world where agility has become decisive, our decentralised organisation, our entrepreneurial culture and the high quality of our teams in the countries and on the ground.

For all these reasons, we are more than ever optimistic, confident and determined.

Ready to seize every opportunity in a beauty market full of promise.

TRIBUTE TO MRS LILIANE BETTENCOURT

Mrs Liliane Bettencourt passed away on 21 September 2017.

Throughout her life, she lived and breathed L'Oréal. She always considered herself the custodian of her father's work and proved to be a source of determined and unfailing support for the company.

Mrs Liliane Bettencourt was eager, determined and proud to see L'Oréal extend its influence worldwide. As François Dalle once said, she had inherited from her father an ardent "desire to see L'Oréal grow". Discreet, astute, and kind-hearted, a person of sound judgement yet very modern in her thinking, Liliane Bettencourt shared with the Group's employees this fabulous adventure, every step of the way.

Strategy

L'Oréal is looking to the future
with confidence,
driven by a clear
mission and strategy

Our mission

Beauty for All

Offering all women and men worldwide the best of cosmetics innovation in terms of quality, efficacy and safety to satisfy all their desires and all their beauty needs in their infinite diversity.

Our strategy

Universalisation

L'Oréal has chosen a unique strategy: Universalisation. It means globalisation that captures, understands and respects differences. Differences in desires, needs and traditions. To offer tailor-made beauty, and meet the aspirations of consumers in every part of the world. L'Oréal is driven by this vision of the world.

The Board of Directors

Stable governance

The composition of the Board reflects L'Oréal's shareholding structure and guarantees the interests of all its shareholders. Alongside the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, there are five directors who represent L'Oréal's major shareholders, seven independent directors and two directors representing the employees.

The diversity and complementarity of the directors' industrial, financial and entrepreneurial expertise equip them to quickly and thoroughly comprehend the development challenges facing L'Oréal, the leader of a globalised and highly competitive cosmetics market in which the need to innovate and adapt is crucial. Most of the directors have experience managing international groups at the highest level. In 2017, Nestlé Board of Directors Chairman Paul Bulcke joined L'Oréal's Board as Vice-Chairman, replacing Peter Brabeck-Letmathe. The Board members represent seven different nationalities and 46% of directors are women (50% of the Committees are chaired by independent women directors).

A Board of Directors that fully assumes its responsibilities to provide strategic reflection and impetus

The Board devotes most of its time to strategic issues, to foster and accelerate the Group's transformation into a more universal, more digital and more sustainable L'Oréal. The Board is kept informed throughout the year about the Group's activities and results, its positions in relation to its competitors, market trends and the expectations of consumers all over the world. It examines acquisition projects and monitors the integration of recently acquired companies. The Board members regularly meet with Group executives. This transparent and constructive dialogue culminates in a shared strategic vision, which gives General Management the confidence necessary for its implementation. This year's strategic seminar focused on the challenges facing Research and Innovation, at the heart of the Group's growth strategy.

Proactive and committed directors

The directors are committed and proactive, driven by the conviction that stringent governance creates value for the company. They always keep the company's long-term interests first in mind as they voice their opinions. The directors play a tireless and dynamic role in the work of the Board and its Committees, which actively contribute to preparing the Board's deliberations. The Board closely monitors changes in best practices and, to ensure that constant progress is achieved, carries out a full review of its modus operandi and organisation every year. It determines which topics to prioritise at this annual review, in line with its role to provide the impetus for L'Oréal's long-term strategy.

Ethics at the heart of L'Oréal's governance and commitments

The Board of Directors places great importance on respecting L'Oréal's ethical principles – Integrity, Respect, Courage and Transparency – and more generally its Code of Ethics. In 2017, the Senior Vice-President and Chief Ethics Officer presented the ethics policy and the initiatives taken in this field, as well as their results. The Board considers these policies to be an integral part of L'Oréal's growth model; it supports their implementation and regularly measures the advances made.

L'Oréal's governance is solid, perfectly in line with the challenges of tomorrow.

Ethics at the heart of L'Oréal's commitments

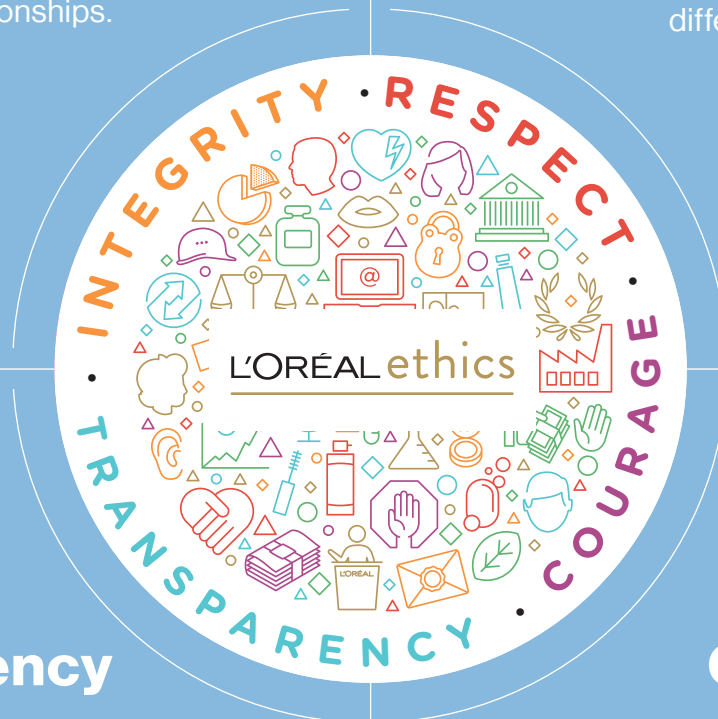

L'Oréal was built on strong ethical principles that guide its development and contribute to building its reputation. These principles are namely the foundation of the Group's policies in terms of compliance, responsible innovation, environmental stewardship, social and societal responsibility and philanthropy.

Integrity

Because acting with integrity is vital to building and maintaining trust and good relationships.

Respect

Because what we do has an impact on many different stakeholders.

Transparency

Because we must always be sincere and able to justify our actions and decisions.

Courage

Because ethical questions are rarely easy but must be addressed.

Ethics Day A key date

More than 60% of employees from 71 countries participated in the ninth annual Ethics Day. Chairman and CEO Jean-Paul Agon, Country General Managers and members of the Executive Committee received more than 5,700 questions: proof of teams' growing interest and their growing maturity with regards to business ethics topics. The question, "What more can we do on ethics at L'Oréal?" generated more than 1,100 suggestions. The proposals will be taken forward through concrete initiatives.

See highlights and photos of the 2017 Ethics Day on the digital version.

Ethics and transparency L'Oréal receives honours

L'Oréal received two awards in recognition of its commitment to ethics and transparency. The Group received the Grand Prix de la Transparence for its Code of Ethics, following the results of the Transparency study, carried out each year on the public financial documentation of the French SBF 120 listed companies. The Ethisphere® Institute, the global leader in defining and advancing the standards of ethical business practices, also ranked the Group as one of the world's most ethical companies.

One Young World Raising awareness about ethical dilemmas in business

During the One Young World Summit held in Bogota in October 2017, L'Oréal Senior Vice-President and Chief Ethics Officer Emmanuel Lulin engaged participants in exercises based on the complex choices leaders face when handling ethical dilemmas.

Our commitments

“Sharing Beauty With All”

The social and environmental responsibility programme “Sharing Beauty With All”, launched in 2013, is aimed at making L’Oréal a model company in terms of sustainable innovation, production and consumption, and in sharing its growth with all the Group’s stakeholders.

Innovating sustainably

By 2020, 100% of L’Oréal’s products will have an improved environmental or social profile. Reduction of the environmental footprint of formulas, respect for biodiversity via a sustainable and responsible sourcing policy for raw materials, eco-design of packaging and commitment to zero deforestation are all levers used by L’Oréal to drive sustainable innovation.

Producing sustainably

L’Oréal has set the target for 2020 of reducing the environmental footprint of its plants and distribution centres by 60% from a 2005 baseline. The reduction of greenhouse gas emissions in absolute terms, of water consumption and of waste generation per finished product unit, and the reduction of impacts related to transportation, have become fundamental criteria for L’Oréal’s industrial performance.

Living sustainably

L’Oréal aims to empower its consumers to make sustainable choices. To achieve this target, the Group adopts several approaches: aggregating information on the environmental and social impact of products, evaluating the footprint of each brand, raising awareness among consumers and making sustainable development desirable.

Developing sustainably

Sharing its growth with its internal and external stakeholders is a priority for L’Oréal. The Group promotes access to work for people from underprivileged communities by deploying various programmes, associates its suppliers with its sustainable development policy and offers its employees the best social practices all over the world, in terms of health insurance cover and social protection.

Citizen Day Record employee participation

Every year, since 2010, L’Oréal employees have devoted a workday to volunteering with charities and environmental organisations. In 2017, the Group’s employees supported over 700 local organisations in 68 countries. More than 30,000 L’Oréal employees on five continents joined in the events, setting a new participation record.

The L'Oréal Corporate Foundation

10 years in action

The L'Oréal Corporate Foundation, founded in 2007 to support women around the globe, celebrated its 10th anniversary. Its aim is to help them realise their potential through two programmes: "For Women in Science" and "Beauty for a Better Life". Read on for a closer look at the initiatives implemented through these programmes.

Supporting female scientists in their careers

Every year, the L'Oréal-UNESCO "For Women in Science" programme celebrates and awards five eminent researchers from five continents. 97 laureates have been awarded since 1998, three of them have received a Nobel prize. This programme also helps more than 275 young women scientists at a crucial moment in their careers, by supporting them during their doctoral or post-doctoral studies. The scholarships are presented at national and regional awards ceremonies in more than 48 countries. Since 1998, 2,800 young women have been selected to receive the scholarship.

Training in the beauty industry for employability

As part of its "Beauty for a Better Life" programme, L'Oréal is joining hands with Les Apprentis d'Auteuil to offer free small business training in the beauty industry in France to people in difficult employability situations. The L'Oréal Corporate Foundation and Groupe SOS in France are joining hands to create L'Atelier des talents, a centre which will offer fast-track professional training to people with some background in hair styling but who no longer work in the field.

The global beauty market

+4 to +5%⁽¹⁾

growth in 2017

Estimated at more than 200 billion euros, the worldwide cosmetics market has grown steadily, spurred on by innovation and the limitless diversity of consumer aspirations. It is a market driven by the development of social media, increasing urbanisation worldwide and rising growth in online beauty spending due to the expected growth of the high-income class between now and 2030, an increase in life expectancy and the continued desire for products that are new, different and better. In this context, L'Oréal has maintained its leadership in 2017⁽²⁾.

The high-income classes in North America and Asia

- The high-income classes are likely to show the fastest population growth in the next 15 years, reaching more than 330 million people by 2030⁽²⁾.
- In the Asia Pacific region, the high-income class is still relatively small, but is set to grow the fastest here between now and 2030.
- North America will continue to be the wealthiest region, and is expected to be home to almost half of the world's high-income class by 2030.

(1) In 2017, the SPOT tool replaced the systems previously used to assess the improvement in the environmental and social impact of our formulas and packaging. SPOT takes more criteria into account and allows for a more complete and in-depth analysis, where the various impacts are weighed according to their contribution to the product’s overall impact. (2) Strategic suppliers are suppliers whose added value is significant for the Group by contributing sustainably to L’Oréal’s strategy by their weight, their innovations, their strategic alignment and their geographical deployment. (3) L’Oréal having sold The Body Shop on 7 September 2017, the beneficiaries of the brand’s Community Trade initiative are no longer counted in the Group’s KPIs. (4) CDP is an independent international organisation which assesses companies’ environmental performance.

Seizing the potential of every market

In a beauty market that pursued its steady growth in 2017, L'Oréal confirmed its position as the worldwide leader in beauty⁽¹⁾, with a strong presence in its three main geographic Zones: Western Europe, North America and the New Markets.

The American market is continuing to grow, but is facing a slowdown in some historical distribution channels. Performance in makeup is being further increased by the brands NYX Professional Makeup and L'Oréal Paris, but haircare is proving less dynamic. The L'Oréal Luxe Division has slowed, against a background of inventory reductions. Yves Saint Laurent and IT Cosmetics however have continued to record double-digit growth. In the fourth quarter, the Professional Products Division saw sales increase, thanks particularly to its partner brands. The Active Cosmetics Division performed well last year, bolstered by the recent acquisition of CeraVe and by the emblematic SkinCeuticals and La Roche-Posay brands.

The best of beauty for “augmented consumers”

Check out the full interview online

The “augmented consumer” revolution

We are in the midst of a major transformation: the “augmented consumer” revolution. Augmented, because smartphones connect consumers to the rest of the world 24/7, creating a significant shift in the consumer-brand relationship. Just ten years ago, brands had a maximum of around ten points of contact with consumers. Today, they have three or four times more: it has become a real dialogue. This consumer revolution has also impacted distribution, which has become omnichannel, from brick-and-mortar stores to digital sales.

Our strategy: strengthen our foundation and step up transformation

The Consumer Products Division's strategy is twofold: strengthen our foundation and our assets on the one hand and step up the Division's transformation on the other, making the most of our entrepreneurial culture and decentralised organisation. Our first asset is the power of our global brands: L'Oréal Paris, positioned as affordable luxury, which meets consumers' premiumisation expectations; Garnier the future global champion in the natural category; and Maybelline New York and NYX Professional Makeup, which have capitalised on the makeup boom in the era of social beauty. To step up the Division's transformation, we are constantly reinventing our growth drivers by producing creative content adapted to each tribe of consumers and to the major digital platforms. We are also developing our omnichannel strategy and taking full advantage of the opportunities afforded by e-commerce.

A favourable context for the future

We are very optimistic about the future of our market for three reasons: the growth of the upper middle class, our main target; the increase in premiumisation in every category; and the democratisation, thanks to digital technologies, of high value-added beauty categories, where our presence is particularly strong.

Brand L'Oréal Paris: “accessible luxury”

The L'Oréal Paris mission is to “seize emerging trends” and ensure the greatest possible number of consumers have access to them. The pioneering and innovative French brand has stepped up its presence on social networks, where it taps into the big new trends propagated by beauty influencers. L'Oréal Paris capitalises on the Group's strengths and its worldwide presence to develop and market new products in record time. The brand's strategy is adapted to each of its segments and is particularly successful in the makeup category.

L'Oréal Paris is also strengthening its image as an aspirational brand that makes luxury accessible. Thanks to its celebrity ambassadors and numerous partnerships in the world of fashion and film, the brand grants its customers entry into an exclusive milieu. In 2017, the Color Riche X Balmain range of lipsticks combined fashion and the latest online trends. The big fashion show organised by L'Oréal Paris on the Champs-Élysées during the Paris Fashion Week was open to all and followed by millions of people on social networks.

To keep pace with the latest online trends, L'Oréal Paris has reinvented its categories. Hair colour flirts with makeup in the Colorista range, for example, which can be found in the makeup aisle in German stores. This agility allows the Group to meet the expectations of increasingly selective and demanding consumers.

E-commerce: consumer trust benefits brands

Today, brands are carefully scrutinised online by consumers. In this context, the strong image of the Division's brands, fuelled by the teams' inventiveness in the countries, is a precious asset, with their star products recommended by many satisfied users. Ultra-digital brands like NYX Professional Makeup capitalise on that trust to accelerate growth. As it pursues the opening of international points of sale, the brand remains very active online. Each store opening becomes an online event followed by thousands of influencers and shared by their followers. The brand's star products, particularly in the lip category, are available in a seemingly infinite number of shades and versions, which consumers take to immediately. Enthusiasm for NYX Professional Makeup is also heightened by the discussions and communities launched by the "makeup junkies" who adore the brand.

Naturalness

Garnier: future natural beauty champion

For consumers looking for transparency and more natural products, Garnier is developing ranges inspired by nature and has set ambitious goals to improve its environmental and social impact. The brand has committed to revamping its formulations to increase the percentage of natural and/or biodegradable ingredients. The brand has reworked the formulas of star products, to reach up to 96% of ingredients of natural origin for some products. Innovations have also been launched, such as the organic charcoal fabric mask inspired by natural trends from Asia. The brand's transformation goes beyond formulas as well. From solidarity sourcing to purchases made by concerned consumers, all the Garnier teams are committed to developing more natural and ethical products.

An exceptional year driven by iconic brands

A fast-growing market

The luxury market is growing strongly, driven on the one hand by the development of a more accessible, easy and relaxed kind of luxury, boosted by social media, and on the other hand, accelerating Chinese consumer spending. This tendency is leading to strong global growth in the selective makeup market, and we are taking full advantage thanks to our makeup and couture inspired brands, and thanks to the comeback of skincare. Meanwhile, new demand is building for a kind of luxury that is increasingly premium and exclusive, as shown by the success of niche fragrances and top-end skincare focused on ever-higher quality. This has led to the desire for exclusive experiences and a constant increase in personalisation.

A comprehensive brand portfolio

The great strength of L'Oréal Luxe is the richness of our brand portfolio, which enables us to meet the expectations of all consumer tribes, at all price levels with a truly global footprint. In addition to our innovative launches, our success lies in our ability to adapt our brands to keep pace with the swift changes of today's digital world, while preserving the longer time span of luxury. The energy and initiative of our country teams play a decisive role in this area, as in many others.

A promising outlook

Consumer behaviours continued to change this year: our brands' e-commerce websites are strategic destinations, and our boutiques are places that offer unique experiences and services. And 2018 is looking promising. The selective market is going to remain dynamic. Chinese consumption trends are set to continue, with the growth of the middle class and its appetite for luxury products. Travel Retail will also benefit from this trend.

Asia The new quest for luxury in Asia

The middle classes in Asia are keen on luxury products. They also perfectly illustrate the two trends that drive the market: younger consumers, who want direct access to iconic brands, often turn to makeup as an affordable option while the most experienced consumers want more exclusive and personalised products or services. Another feature that sets these new consumers apart is their mobility. Chinese customers, in particular, buy luxury beauty products in Asia and around the globe. To meet their expectations, L'Oréal's Travel Retail teams have adapted their offering in duty-free shopping centres – which can be found in many major Asian cities – as well as in international airports. Couture brands Yves Saint Laurent and Giorgio Armani, with roots in the fashion world and known for their fashion and colour authority, are particularly desired. Their star products draw people to stores and are at the heart of discussions on social networks.

Brand Lancôme wins over Millennials⁽¹⁾

Lancôme, the number one selective women’s beauty brand worldwide⁽²⁾ has reinvented itself to appeal to all generations while remaining an iconic French luxury brand. It stands out from the crowd with innovative packaging, digital marketing and partnerships with influential ambassadors Taylor Hill and Lily Collins. This year’s biggest successes included Monsieur Big mascara, Juicy Shaker and Matte Shaker lipsticks. And let’s not forget the latest addition to the Génifique franchise, Advanced Génifique Sensitive Dual Concentrate, which embodies the essence of Lancôme skincare: effective, innovative and universal. The La Vie est Belle fragrance and its new L’Éclat version were also big hits. Capsule collections for Christmas and Chinese New Year as well as personalisation services such as product engraving also help attract new consumers.

 Read more on the digital version.

Successful fragrance collections

L’Oréal is meeting consumer demand for exclusive luxury products that remain rare with its private collections – Le Vestiaire by Yves Saint Laurent and the iconic Armani Privé collection – complete with 2017 additions, and niche fragrance brands such as Maison Margiela and Atelier Cologne.

Brand IT Cosmetics: where makeup meets skincare

Acquired by L’Oréal in 2016, IT Cosmetics is blurring the lines between makeup and skincare. The brand founded by Jamie Kern Couples its mission – “to reveal the beauty of every woman” – with a “problem/solution” approach to create formulas that respect the skin and provide scientifically proven results. Launched through TV shows in the United States, the first IT Cosmetics products immediately found their market and enthusiastic customers who share before and after pictures on social networks. Specialising in face makeup, IT Cosmetics has developed a comprehensive offering in the category. Its skincare range, and particularly its anti-ageing moisturiser Confidence in a Cream, also performs well. IT Cosmetics is expanding internationally with a launch in Selfridges in the United Kingdom in 2017 and continued growth in Canada.

Professional beauty, a means of personal expression

Creating the best salon experience

At a time when everyone is talking about consumer experiences and community engagement, we have – thanks to our 1.5 million partner hairdressers and the expertise and inventiveness of our teams all over the world – an incredible opportunity to make a difference. Consumers are looking for unique hairstyles, personalised assessments, customised products and creative digital tools that help them express their identities.

Consumer enthusiasm for hair colour is a real opportunity to showcase hairdressers' expertise and skills. We work with them to co-create colour palettes and new techniques designed to meet consumer expectations. Our innovations and exclusive salon ranges allow them to stay ahead of the game.

Our priority is to provide consumers with the best possible salon experience, and digital technology is a welcome tool. Our Salon Secret content platform and the quality development of new distribution channels has boosted salon traffic, as has the L'Oréal Professionnel Style My Hair app, downloaded over two million times⁽²⁾.

Back to basics

Our business fundamentals underwent a thorough revamp in 2017. The Division recorded second-semester growth in line with the market, with the success of major brand initiatives. In 2018, we have several assets to provide consumers with a unique and personalised salon experience thanks to our Salon E-motion™ programme and L'Oréal Professionnel Style My Hair app, which now features augmented reality.

Trends New hair colour trends

Hair colour has become a means for consumers to express their personal identity, style and belonging to a community. Trends – which take inspiration from the world of makeup – are becoming increasingly sophisticated and distinctive: pastel, multicoloured, ombré, etc. These techniques, which professionals have mastered best, firmly place hairdressers and haircare brands at the heart of this movement.

The Professional Products Division works with the best stylists to develop new colours and techniques in line with emerging trends. In the spring of 2017, L'Oréal Professionnel invited 40 celebrated colourists to be involved in every stage of development for a new product: prototype, development of techniques, test workshops and training via tutorials. Colorful Hair, Shimmer, Flash, Pastel Hair, and SmartBond were also developed through co-creation.

L'Oréal also builds creative partnerships with innovative professionals. For example, Redken works with two star hairstylists – Guido Palau and Josh Wood – to create unique looks and share them on social networks each month.

To share its knowledge of trends with hairdressers, L'Oréal Professionnel created a Flash Trend Alert, which sends out a message when a new trend has been identified on social networks.

Digitalisation

The digital revolution in hair salons

87% of women consult hairdressing tutorials on YouTube. 700 million beauty videos are watched on the platform each month⁽¹⁾. To stand out and create their identities, social beautistas⁽²⁾ are looking for advice. To respond to these consumers, the Professional Products Division has adapted its ways of working and created a social listening tool. L'Oréal Professionnel is the first brand to roll out such a model. It can now reply to 100% of comments and questions asked online, but also identify trends that appear in the posts. The Division is also rolling out two programmes – Salon Secret and Salon E-motion™ – designed to enhance salon attractiveness by bringing customers and professionals together. Last but not least, applications have also been developed to showcase professional expertise in the retail channel. The “K Profile” app by Kérastase allows hairdressers to prescribe regimens to be used in salons and at home.

From hair salon to “creative hub”

In the United Kingdom, professional hair salons are reinventing themselves to provide customers with unique experiences. Josh Wood – a pioneer in the field – has organised his business into “creative hubs”, to offer customers bespoke hair dyes specially designed to suit them.

Natural products

L'Oréal is committed to developing natural professional beauty products

Combining beauty and naturalness has become an important purchasing criterion for a growing number of consumers. To meet their expectations, L'Oréal is committed to an approach that combines corporate social responsibility with excellence in skincare. Aura Botanica by Kérastase, an elegant luxury range containing 98% of natural ingredients, also boasts responsible sourcing. Launched worldwide in 2017, Biologie R.A.W. (Real.Authentic.Wholesome.) is further proof of the Group's commitment to the environment: 99% of the ingredients used to create these haircare products are biodegradable, and, depending on the formula, 70 to 100% are of natural origin. The Division's portfolio also includes aromatherapy pioneer Decléor.

Health is the future of beauty

Dermocosmetics: combining health with immediate results

Skincare is the leading category in the beauty market⁽³⁾ – a category revolutionised by health and spearheaded by dermocosmetics. This area is also perfectly aligned with current trends: the desire for health, safety, well-being, authenticity and naturalness. Consumer expectations are twofold. On the one hand, they want products that combat external, environmental and lifestyle factors through highly efficient products whilst preventing future damage. On the other, they are looking for immediately visible results.

Leading brands that combine health and well-being

Our longstanding conviction that “health is the future of beauty” has put us ahead of the game. With growth that outperforms the market, we have confirmed the Division’s leadership and proven our strategy to be successful. We have a portfolio of perfectly complementary brands.

Brands recommended by healthcare professionals, from aesthetic medicine (SkinCeuticals) to dermatology (La Roche-Posay), to accessible skincare (CeraVe) and natural skincare (Vichy). In the natural market, we have the 100% certified organic brand Sanoflore and fragrant natural products by Roger&Gallet.

Addressing consumer needs

We don’t define ourselves by our distribution channels, but by our vision of health and beauty, which includes products, services and professional advice, regardless of which point of contact our consumers choose. We have two major assets to build consumer trust and our credibility: a close relationship with committed medical experts all over the world who feed our brands’ developments and endorse our products and facilitate engagement; and a longstanding connection with our consumers, who recommend our products to each other and become our most valuable ambassadors.

Digital Responding to new consumer expectations on social networks

On social networks, our brands answer consumer questions, and provide them with experiences.

Skincare, especially face care, is an increasingly discussed topic on social networks⁽¹⁾. Our brands use social media and online platforms to reach out to consumers, providing content that answers their questions.

On forums and social networks, our brands are striving to build communities where information and dermatological advice directly linked to the issues that concern specific groups can be shared. La Roche-Posay targets its communications according to the type of skin problem to be treated: acne (#stopspots), dryness (Lipikar families), cancer care (Better skin throughout cancer), moles (Skin Checker), etc. By producing targeted content, the brand engages consumers and focuses discussions on these topics and their treatment through La Roche-Posay products.

Online presence also allows our brands to offer complementary services designed to provide consumers with a comprehensive skincare experience that is both sensory and emotional, thereby building trust. For example, our brands offer skin diagnostics⁽²⁾ online and in stores, as well as daily skincare regimens like La Roche-Posay's personalised "J'aime ma peau sensible"⁽³⁾ programme.

Acquisition

CeraVe: a simple, accessible range

Founded in the United States in 2005 and developed with American dermatologists, CeraVe offers a full range of daily skincare products for the face and body, as well as a range for babies. With its simple, accessible products, the brand perfectly complements the Division's portfolio. L'Oréal's USA teams have already integrated the brand into the Group, maintaining its model to boost the Group's impact: solid recommendations from American dermatologists, widespread distribution, and strong consumer engagement on social networks.

Minéral 89: the incredibly simple formula for natural skincare

Skincare consumers want natural, authentic, easy-to-use, innovative and effective products that provide pure and immediate sensory experiences. The clearest proof of this universal trend is the global success of Vichy's Minéral 89 launch on social networks. The product's simplicity – made from just 11 ingredients, including 89% Vichy mineral water – was an instant hit with consumers. People are also taken by how easy it is to use.

To stay ahead of the game, we are both quick and inventive

Several pivotal shifts are transforming Research & Innovation. New scientific and technological advances, changes in consumer trends, and environmental concerns all present challenges Research & Innovation will rise to as it strives to meet consumer expectations, like all of L'Oréal's teams. To stay ahead of the game, we are both quick and inventive. Quick, because the Group is underpinned by a wealth of data, patents and research that allows it to develop innovations in record time and better serve consumers. We take advantage of our company's intellectual capital to roll out "coalescent innovations", which combine several existing technologies to create new products. Inventive, because our research strategy also focuses on developing disruptive scientific and technological innovations in every cosmetics category. Safety, which is crucial for our customers and the environment, has always been one of L'Oréal's fundamental commitments.

Predictive evaluation Creating safe beauty products

To ensure the safety and quality of future products, L'Oréal evaluates ingredient safety very early on, through a rigorous predictive process featuring innovative methods. The wealth of knowledge and data on ingredients and the predictive methods L'Oréal has at its disposal represent significant added value. Big data processing can further help take full advantage of this rich knowledge base. Thanks to tissue engineering, reconstructed human tissue is now an important tool that helps build biological understanding and conduct product application and skin reaction tests including tests for ageing, UV exposure, and pollution.

Environment

Safeguarding water quality and resources

L'Oréal's global environmental approach covers a product's entire lifecycle, from the origins of the raw materials through to end-of-life management. It takes into account the impact a product has on water resources, whose dwindling supply is a major environmental challenge. Research & Innovation pursues two water-protection strategies: preserving existing reserves and assessing their quality. Its initiatives focus on developing cosmetics that use less water and on formulas with minimal environmental impact. L'Oréal evaluates the environmental impact of raw materials used through two key parameters: biodegradability and the absence of aquatic ecotoxicity.

Safety

100 years of experience in guaranteeing product safety

Ensuring the quality and safety of all L'Oréal products for all consumers has been a priority for the Group for over 100 years. This guarantee relies on a rigorous system which encompasses every aspect of our production process worldwide, from the choice of ingredients to product formulation, from manufacturing to compliance with market regulations.

Innovation

Open innovation, the secret behind new beauty products

To enhance flexibility and responsiveness and decrease lead time, L'Oréal pursues open innovation by developing partnerships with laboratories, research institutions, startups, suppliers and more. By combining its vast database, formidable roll-out abilities and innovation expertise with the advances made by other industry players, the Group is contributing to the development of a promising and potent new innovation strategy for the beauty market. In line with this approach, L'Oréal has begun a partnership with the South Korean startup NanoEnTek, which has developed a miniature diagnostic⁽¹⁾ tool which analyses the proteins on the skin's surface to determine the consumer's skin type. Combined with a visual assessment and a questionnaire, it recommends a personalised product perfectly suited to the consumer's needs.

Operations

Operations is accelerating

Operations is currently undergoing more structural changes than ever before. Consumers want to be able to access all our products anywhere, anytime, but they also want concrete proof of their quality, traceability, environmental responsibility and naturalness. This context has been a source of inspiration for the way we work for several years now. We have stepped up our global transformation in two strategic areas: on the one hand, the agility of our solutions and processes; on the other, our benchmark role in terms of product safety and quality, and environmental protection.

Agility and exemplary commitments

Agility in our product designs, with in-house 3D laboratories and fast prototyping. Industrial agility, thanks to new Industry 4.0 technologies. Supply chain agility, which is rising thanks to the digital transformation. The quality of the seven billion products we manufacture each year, the safety of our employees, and social and environmental protection are at the heart of what we do. These fundamental principles upheld by Operations ensure a solid competitive advantage for L'Oréal and its brands and exemplify our respect for our consumers, our employees and the planet.

Industry 4.0

Enhancing agility

From prototyping to distribution, new technologies have improved the production process, making it more flexible and efficient for consumers. To quickly roll out prototypes, L'Oréal now has in-house 3D laboratories. To continuously adapt its lines to new trends, the Group relies heavily on digital production tools and has introduced collaborative robots or "cobots" to help operators with certain steps. Machines are also helping to improve data processing. To simplify logistics, L'Oréal is using RFID⁽¹⁾ technology: a chip that serves as a label and simplifies the path to purchase and makes operational management in stores easier. In 2017, L'Oréal opened a NYX Professional Makeup store fully equipped with RFID chips – a first in the cosmetics sector.

Environment

Responsible packaging

Packaging – the most important marker of brand identity for consumers – plays a crucial role in purchasing choices for today’s more environmentally-conscious market. Since 2007, L’Oréal has had a “Packaging & Environment” policy that includes the “3R” eco-design approach: Respect the consumer and the environment, Reduce packaging volume and weight, Replace materials having a high environmental footprint with recycled materials or manufactured using renewable energy. As part of the “Sharing Beauty With All” programme, L’Oréal has committed to ensuring all its products feature an improved environmental or social profile by 2020. In 2017, 76% of products met this standard.

Three “A” ratings for sustainable production at L’Oréal

L’Oréal is one of just two companies to have received an “A” rating from CDP⁽²⁾ in each of the three categories: the fight against climate change, responsible water management, and the fight against deforestation.

E-commerce

Supply chain secrets

In stores or online, consumers expect simplicity and continuity from their purchasing experience. They want to decide where, when and how their product will be delivered. The entire L’Oréal supply chain⁽¹⁾ is undergoing a transformation to improve agility and keep in step with this revolution. To meet this demand, L’Oréal teams organise adaptable real-time solutions, regardless of the origin and destination of the order. The Group, which records an order every two seconds, must reach over a billion consumers scattered across the globe simultaneously and with little lead time. To rise to these challenges, L’Oréal has automated and optimised flows at its logistics centres, located in 50 countries. With cutting-edge Industry 4.0 equipment, L’Oréal is able to supply products to close to 500,000 delivery points worldwide. E-commerce is a global challenge for the Group, which is adapting its offer to suit this new consumption model, with consistent high-quality service, whatever the distribution channel, all while maintaining economic performance.

Digital

Lubomira Rochet
Chief Digital Officer

In a fast digitalising world, L'Oréal is pivoting to a "digital-first" mindset

In 2017, L'Oréal continued to expand its digital leadership in all areas: e-commerce, marketing, social networks and cosmetics technologies. E-commerce now accounts for 8%⁽¹⁾ of Group sales and is L'Oréal's third "country", after the United States and China. The boom in online sales has significantly contributed to the Group's growth and played a positive role in all categories. Social networks, engagement and influencer marketing play an increasingly important role in our brands' marketing strategies. In 2017, four L'Oréal brands made the Earned Media Value Top 10⁽²⁾: L'Oréal Paris, NYX Professional Makeup, Maybelline New York and Urban Decay.

A sustainable digital transformation

L'Oréal's digital transformation is building momentum, and we are doing everything in our power to ensure it is a lasting one. First, the Group measures its digital return on investment, to ensure the transformation is sustainable and successful. Next, L'Oréal is committed to respecting data confidentiality with a view to building trust and loyalty between brands and their consumers. Finally, L'Oréal trains and motivates all its teams and employees to be a part of the digital acceleration.

Thanks to its ability to adapt, L'Oréal has turned the digital revolution into a powerful tool that drives its competitive edge and brings it closer to consumers in a sustainable, respectful and inclusive model.

Technology

How augmented reality is revolutionising the beauty experience

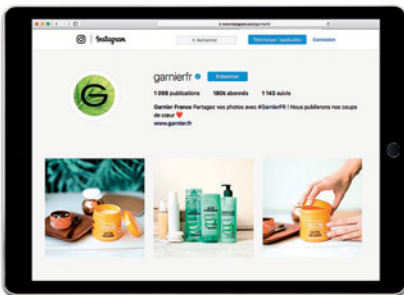

In stores, customers can benefit from the advice of professionals and try out products before making a decision. To provide the same level of service online, the brands have developed "beauty companions". These digital services guide consumers and help them choose the right products for them. In addition to providing targeted advice, they also allow users to test products virtually, with very realistic results: 3D makeup and hair colour testers, complexion detectors, skin assessments, etc. L'Oréal and Perfect Corp. launched a global partnership to integrate the Group's makeup products into the YouCam Makeup augmented reality app, which is also available in stores. L'Oréal Professionnel announced the launch of the first 3D hair colour tester: based on artificial intelligence, it has been incorporated into the Style My Hair app, which is used by consumers and hairdressers.

Digital marketing

Digital communications: a pillar of marketing strategies

With more than 38% of its media budget invested in digital platforms, a billion people visiting its websites and nearly 250 million followers on social networks, L'Oréal is adapting its content to the new creative codes of the digital world. The campaigns for Colorista by L'Oréal Paris, Fructis by Garnier, Minéral 89 by Vichy and the Yves Saint Laurent Vernis à Lèvres range were designed for digital platforms such as Facebook and Instagram and performed really well with consumers. People all over the world now also want personalised content. Thanks to the precision marketing⁽¹⁾ programme and our teams' agility in the subsidiaries, the Group is increasingly personalising content to a specific context and path to purchase to ensure the right message is sent at the right time. To evaluate return on investment, the Digital team has developed a set of powerful proprietary tools that marketers in the countries and media directors can now use to measure the real-time performance of their digital campaigns and focus on the most effective channels. These measures in the countries, shared widely throughout the Group, contribute to the Group's best practices.

Open innovation

Co-creating the future of beauty with visionary startups

L'Oréal backs the new generation of beauty entrepreneurs by establishing partnerships with startup incubators like Founders Factory in London or Station F in Paris. The Group provides these young businesses with a team of internal experts who offer operational support and mentoring. L'Oréal's 100 years of beauty experience and access to a wealth of marketing, research and innovation, and operational specialists are a real asset for these young entrepreneurs. In return, L'Oréal's brands benefit from innovations launched by startups, from their creativity and ability to bring innovative services to market before anyone else. L'Oréal is the official sponsor for a beauty startup accelerator at Station F.

Digital Marketing LEVEL 1

Digital skills at the heart of professional transformations

L'Oréal and General Assembly⁽²⁾ developed DM1 or "Digital Marketing Level 1": a professional test designed to help individuals and companies assess the full range of skills required for digital marketing today. L'Oréal is the first company to use DM1 on a large scale.

Human Relations

Jérôme Tixier
Executive Vice-President Human Relations and Advisor to the Chairman

Transforming the company to meet employees' new expectations

Our Human Relations policy has always been for one and for all: on the one hand, we recruit and nurture talents and the Group's future executives through very personalised trajectories, and on the other, we strive to build a solid Group with an inclusive, collaborative and protective environment and a strong corporate entrepreneurial culture.

In addition, we are responsible for helping the company evolve and for supporting employees through the process. Human Relations now plays this change management role on a continuous basis in a world where the workplace is constantly changing, where the economic context is volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous (VUCA), and where the digital revolution is changing professions and ways of working.

We are witnessing the emergence of a new approach to careers: employees expect greater flexibility and are willing to try out different careers but still demand high social protection. This emerging status quo has created new challenges for the company, whose strength lies precisely in its ability to transform itself and meet the dual expectations of flexibility and protection.

Simplicity⁽²⁾ Changing the way we work

L'Oréal is changing, and so are our ways of working. The Simplicity programme⁽²⁾ was created to support this transformation and infuse the company with a new mindset based on cooperation and trust. With this comprehensive programme, the Group is laying the groundwork for agile and lasting growth by training adaptable, efficient teams. It is also ensuring its continued attractiveness as a benchmark employer that offers increasingly interesting and innovative jobs as well as a high-quality work environment. Simplicity has been rolled out throughout the Group through a manifesto shared with all employees, and through training programmes like Lead & Enable, which supports managers as they navigate these changes in work practices.

Share & Care L'Oréal's commitment to social protection

The Share & Care programme, launched in 2013, has rolled out the L'Oréal social model worldwide, to align employee benefits with the highest standards: a minimum of 14 weeks maternity leave, death and disability benefits, flexible work hours, improved working conditions, etc. The programme is now entering a second phase, with new measures set for implementation by 2020 to enhance social protection in four areas: benefits, health, parenthood and quality of life at work. Upcoming measures will include instituting a minimum paternity leave of 10 days with full pay, expanding flexible working hours and telecommuting wherever possible, and broadening the scope of employee benefits.

Equileap No.1 in gender equality

L'Oréal was ranked number one by Equileap 2017, the first global, inter-industry ranking to measure gender equality performance. Nineteen criteria were used to assess 3,048 companies from 23 countries.

Corporate culture Building attractiveness and engagement

To better share its values with all employees, particularly those who have just joined the Group, Human Relations has created a document titled Life@L'Oréal, which communicates the L'Oréal culture to new employees. New employee orientation has also been strengthened through the inclusion of events focused on our corporate culture and strategic vision. Each new employee is also encouraged to download the new FIT culture⁽¹⁾ application. This digital coach helps employees appropriate key values through challenges, personal stories and videos. In addition to this daily guidance, employees can also benefit from MOOCs⁽²⁾ and corporate culture learning games.

Administration and Finance

Christian Mulliez
Executive Vice-President
Chief Financial Officer

Building trust and supporting the long-term growth of L'Oréal

2017 was another year of growth in sales, results and profitability. The Administration and Finance teams work towards fostering a solid relationship of trust with all stakeholders centred around attentiveness, constant vigilance, fairness, transparency, professionalism and an ethical approach in our interactions. A focus on service, expertise, monitoring and best practices is at the heart of all that we do.

This year once again, the Administration and Finance teams worked closely with the Group's different entities. They strongly contributed to the economic and financial management of L'Oréal's businesses, helping to identify risks and opportunities, implement solutions in response to changes in consumption and buying habits, and optimise real-time allocation of resources.

The Group's financial health is underpinned by committed operational discipline, closely monitored cash flows and secure financing. We maintain a close relationship with shareholders based on dialogue that consistently provides fair and transparent information as well as a practical perspective about the Group's activities within the beauty market. The Administration and Finance teams also work to assist the Board of Directors and its Committees with a view to ensuring the long-term growth of L'Oréal.

Brands

Protecting its assets

The "Intellectual Property – Brands" department interacts with the operational and functional Divisions throughout the product lifecycle: prior to launch to safeguard L'Oréal's intellectual property and ensure there is no infringement of third-party intellectual property rights, and post-launch to ensure that the Group's brands are not copied. With marketing and the countries, it protects the various components of a brand's identity: a signature (Lancôme), a product line (Fructis), the name of a product (Colossal) or ingredient (Aminexil), a slogan ("Because I'm worth it"), the form of a product (Viktor&Rolf Bonbon bottle), a logo (Kiehl's) or even a colour. With the Research & Innovation, Operations and Marketing teams, the department works on patents that protect technological innovations, such as Lancôme's Génifique Advanced Sensitive Dual Concentrate. All this strengthens L'Oréal's competitiveness.

Service

Supporting changes in consumption

The Administration and Finance teams work with the brands and countries to effectively respond to changes in consumer habits. Consumers expect more personalised services and a seamless fluid shopping experience, particularly in our brands' own stores and on e-commerce sites. Our businesses are putting in place the technologies required to roll out personalised diagnostic and recommendation tools for customers, as well as to make transactions smoother, in strict compliance with the law and best practices.

Shareholders

Registered shares: loyalty bonus

Shareholders who hold their shares in registered form receive a loyalty bonus of +10% of the dividend⁽¹⁾ after holding registered shares continuously for two full calendar years up until the dividend payment date. The +10% loyalty bonus is maintained in subsequent years if the shares continue to be held in registered form. Registered shares are registered in the holder's name, which means that they also receive information directly from L'Oréal and are invited to attend the Annual General Meeting. Holding registered shares has no distinct tax implications as they are subject to the same taxation rules as bearer shares.

Corporate Social Responsibility

Alexandra Palt
Chief Corporate Responsibility Officer and Senior Vice-President of the L'Oréal Foundation

Making sustainable development part of our daily lives

Consumer and employee expectations are evolving to focus on greater consciousness, health and naturalness. We are witnessing a real environmental awakening which is changing the way in which consumers make choices and the way we work.

L'Oréal participates in and supports this significant shift in mindset by developing sustainable production and consumption methods. With the founding of "Sharing Beauty With All" in 2013, we are committed to reaching ambitious 2020 goals. Significant progress was made in 2017. For the second consecutive year, CDP⁽¹⁾ rewarded this quest for progress by awarding L'Oréal three "A" ratings. L'Oréal aims to actively help overcome the serious environmental challenges facing our planet. As part of the Science Based Targets⁽²⁾ initiative, we have set a new series of goals for 2030: we will reduce our total greenhouse gas emissions – direct and indirect – by 25% in absolute value compared with 2016. By 2025, all of our sites will be required to achieve carbon neutrality and all our plastic packaging will be refillable, reusable, recyclable or compostable.

This transformation to make L'Oréal more responsible and sustainable plays a fundamental role in the Group's strategy: it contributes to employee pride and benefits consumers, the beauty sector as well as future generations.

"Sharing Beauty With All" L'Oréal's sustainable transformation programme

"Sharing Beauty With All" is founded on a single conviction: to truly change the Group, the programme must have an impact on the entire value chain and involve every business line and product. The company is undergoing a comprehensive transformation every day to innovate, produce, consume and grow sustainably and responsibly.

To maintain constant progress, L'Oréal has opened a continuous dialogue with all its stakeholders. Employees are today involved in the transformation process. The Group has incorporated sustainable development performance indicators into its supplier selection process and guides them by providing training materials. By marketing more responsible products and encouraging its brands to campaign for the cause, L'Oréal is also urging its customers to practice sustainable consumption.

The Group's efforts to reduce its environmental impact have been recognised by third-party organisations. In 2017, L'Oréal was one of only two companies worldwide to receive from the CDP⁽¹⁾ an "A" rating in each of the organisation's three categories (water, climate and forest).

Climate

Women fight against climate change

The Women4Climate initiative was launched by C40 Cities, an international network uniting 90 big cities and metropolitan areas across the globe in their efforts to fight climate change. With this mentoring initiative, the network aims to support and train women as they develop local solutions aimed at limiting the impact of global warming. L'Oréal joined the initiative as a founding partner. In the cities that have joined the programme, L'Oréal mobilises women leaders from the Group to mentor young women selected locally and help them develop their projects and strengthen their leadership abilities. Partnerships have already been set in motion in Mexico City and in Paris, where Alexandra Palt and Barbara Lavernos serve as mentors. 650 million people from 90 cities are represented by C40 Cities.

India

Digital solidarity sourcing

Located in a "priority development zone" of the Chennai Metropolitan Area, L'Oréal's Website Factory⁽¹⁾ employs 69 people, a number which is expected to double in 2018. This initiative revolves around: job development, inclusion of vulnerable local communities, and equal treatment for women and minorities. L'Oréal Paris, Garnier, Kérastase and Essie already use this service to roll out and maintain their websites.

(1) Project for developing websites.

Sustainable development

Responsible beauty in China

In 2017, L'Oréal China celebrated its 20th anniversary, as well as significant progress in terms of sustainable development in the four areas of the "Sharing Beauty With All" programme. To reduce the environmental impact of formulas and packaging, L'Oréal is innovating to improve the biodegradability of its formulas and reduce water consumption related to product use. For example, the L'Oréal Paris range of anti-dandruff shampoos is 95.1% biodegradable, and its water footprint is 90% lower than the category average. With the Suzhou factory fully powered by renewable energy, China is also doing its part in terms of sustainable production. To raise awareness about more sustainable and responsible lifestyles, the Group partnered with the Chinese Ministry of the Environment to launch a "green consumption initiative" in 2017. L'Oréal China is also committed to supporting communities on the ground by developing partnerships with local organisations or working with the L'Oréal Corporate Foundation.
